11/18 WED — THE AIRLINE SCAM THAT CAN STRAND YOU

Airdate Wed Nov 18, 2026 · tapes Fri Nov 13 · A only (one long story) · no guest · 1 break · Stage: videos

SUMMARY

When a flight goes wrong, people search for the airline's number, and the "agent" who answers is a scammer who charges them to fix it, or logs in and cancels the real trip. It's spreading: Google's own AI answers have handed out scam numbers, fake emails carry passengers' real confirmation codes, fake booking sites sell tickets that don't exist, and thieves work the baggage carousel. Then the one place to get your airline's number every time, and five more ways to keep your trip and your money.

THE SHOW

1. Tease (opens on clip 1: the Omaha mom on the call that said "all four tickets are on standby")
2. A FAKE AIRLINE AGENT TOOK $7,000 FROM THIS FAMILY… WHILE THEY WERE TRYING TO GET HOME (clip 1)
3. THE FAKE AGENT CAME BACK… AND ASKED FOR MORE MONEY (clip 2)
4. THE FAKE AGENT LOGGED INTO HER ACCOUNT… AND CANCELED HER REAL FLIGHT (clip 3)
5. //// Break: generic ad lead-in
6. NOW GOOGLE'S OWN AI CAN HAND YOU THE SCAMMER'S NUMBER (clip 4, demo)
7. THIS FAKE AIRLINE EMAIL KNOWS YOUR NAME… AND YOUR CONFIRMATION CODE (clips 5–6)
8. THE AIRLINE TOLD THIS FAMILY THEIR TICKETS WERE FAKE… AT THE COUNTER (clip 7)
9. THIEVES ARE WORKING THE BAGGAGE CAROUSEL… AND YOUR BAG IS NEXT (clip 8)

THE TEASE

A1 · the hook

- Your trip home falls apart, you call the airline for help, and the agent says all your tickets are "on standby." Pay now, you'll get it back.
- That agent doesn't work for the airline. He's a scammer, and he's waiting for your call.
- You're going to meet a family who paid seven thousand dollars to a voice on the phone, just to get home.
- Then the fake agent who got into a woman's account and canceled her real flight.
- Plus the one place to get your airline's number, every single time.

A FAKE AIRLINE AGENT TOOK $7,000 FROM THIS FAMILY… WHILE THEY WERE TRYING TO GET HOME

A2 · Omaha, NE (in Cancun) · Jun 2026

- If you ever search online for your airline's phone number, stop. Watch this first.
- This family was on vacation in Mexico and couldn't check in for the flight home.
- So they searched for the airline's customer service number on their phone and called it.
- The agent said all four tickets were on standby, and there was a way to fix it right away. So what did it cost them?

CLIP 1 (HORIZONTAL): First Alert 6 (WOWT) — Alleged scam uses phony number for airline · Jun 4, 2026 · 2:54

- 0:21–0:43 ("I WAS TOTALLY PANICKING") // BUTT 0:48–1:13 ("KEEP ON REPEATING THE SAME STORY") // BUTT 1:20–1:31 ("A SITUATION TO WALK AWAY FROM")
- Soundbite: "A relaxing week in Cancun ended with shaken nerves... when she tried to check in the family for the return flight. 'He said like, hey, you're all four tickets are in standby... the moment I heard that word standby, you know, I was totally panicking.'" // "...you googled the number, thinking it was Delta, but that turned out to be scammers. And they wanted $7,000 to rebook the tickets, which the couple paid, but had been promised to refund. 'Every 14 days we used to call and they... keep on repeating the same story...'" // "If somebody says your confirmed reservation is suddenly on standby and you need to pay right now to fix it, that is not how airlines work, and that is a situation to walk away from."
- ⚠️ UNVERIFIED: timed from a Whisper transcript of WOWT's site copy of the same 2:54 package (YouTube captions were blocked); the editor confirms the outcues on the YouTube copy.

- Out: Seven thousand dollars, to a man who never worked for the airline. And once they have you, they don't let go.
- Red flag: "your confirmed seat is suddenly on standby, pay now to fix it." That's not how airlines work. Hang up.

THE FAKE AGENT CAME BACK... AND ASKED FOR MORE MONEY

A3 · Phoenix, AZ · Sep 2025 · ⚠️ old case

- But it gets worse: once they have you, they come back for more.
- This woman's flight was canceled, so she searched for her airline's number and called.
- The "agent" charged her a thousand dollars to rebook, and promised it back. Months later he had a new offer.
- So what did he want this time?

CLIP 2 (HORIZONTAL): ABC15 Arizona — Phoenix woman scammed by American Airlines imposter after flight cancellation · Jun 24, 2026 · 2:54

- 0:28–0:50 ("REPAID VERY, VERY SOON") // BUTT 0:55–1:23 ("TO GET YOUR REFUND") // BUTT 1:30–1:46 ("PRETENDING TO BE AMERICAN AIRLINES")
- Soundbite: "I've had an issue getting a refund from American Airlines and so last September, my flight was canceled and I called and so they charged me a thousand and ten dollars for that rebooking and then they said that it was going to be repaid very, very soon." // "...eventually she was told she would need to pay the airline more money to get her refund. 'You're going to have to pay us a thousand and ten dollars and we're going to give you two thousand and twenty dollars... because it's taken so long for you to get your refund.'" // "You should never have to pay money for refund... the number she called was not the airline. It was someone pretending to be American Airlines."
- ⚠️ LEGAL: segment 1 sounds like a complaint about American Airlines; segment 3's reveal (an impostor) has to run with it. Don't drop the third segment.
- ⚠️ UNVERIFIED: timed from a Whisper transcript of the page's video stream; confirm on the pull.

- Out: Pay a thousand dollars... to get a refund. That's the tell, right there. But it gets worse.
- Red flag: if anyone asks you to pay money to get a refund, it's a scam. Every time.

THE FAKE AGENT LOGGED INTO HER ACCOUNT... AND CANCELED HER REAL FLIGHT

A4 · River Forest, IL · Jul 2026

- And now they're not just taking your money. They're taking your trip.
- This woman was trying to change a nonrefundable flight, and she ended up on the phone with a man who said he could fix it.
- He got into her airline account and charged her about four thousand dollars for an "upgrade."
- Then he did something else. So what happened to the flight she'd already paid for?

CLIP 3 (HORIZONTAL): ABC 7 Chicago — Suburban woman recovers nearly $4K after fake airline support scam · Jul 23, 2026 · 4:14

- 0:14–0:31 ("A NON-REFUNDABLE PURCHASE") // BUTT 1:00–1:24 ("HE WAS THE ONE WHO CANCELED IT")
- Soundbite: "It's too much money to ignore and been like, 'Oh, well, I got got.'... was trying to change her Icelandair flight from Chicago to the UK, but it was a non-refundable purchase." // "'Very apologetic, um, saying he'll be able to help me.' She says he told her he could override the non-refundable tickets by logging into her account... then canceling everything. It was all a scam to get her to pay the crooks about $4,000 more... 'That scammer logged into my account. He was the one who canceled it.'"
- ⚠️ LEGAL: the cut skips 0:34–0:59 on purpose: she says Icelandair's own chat gave her the scam number, and the airline says it found no evidence of that. Don't extend segment 1 past 0:31.

- Out: He canceled her real flight, from inside her own account. Imagine finding that out at the gate.
- Red flag: a real agent never needs your password or a code from your phone. If they ask, hang up.

BREAK — generic ad lead-in. Next: the scammer's number showing up in Google's own answers, and a fake airline email that already knows your confirmation code.

NOW GOOGLE'S OWN AI CAN HAND YOU THE SCAMMER'S NUMBER

A5 · Las Vegas, NV (and Boston, MA) · Aug 2025 · ⚠️ old case

- And now it's spreading to the place you'd least expect: the answer at the top of your search.
- Investigators found Google's AI answers sending travelers straight to scam call centers.
- The numbers were planted on real websites, even the town website of The Villages in Florida.
- One man who fell for it recorded his own screen to show exactly what Google told him. So what did it say?

CLIP 4 (HORIZONTAL): The Rivlin Group — I Got Scammed by a Fake Royal Caribbean Number | AI Search Scam Warning! · 2025 (upload date unconfirmed) · 8:10

- 1:18–1:38 ("THE AI RESULT CAME UP") // BUTT 2:11–2:40 ("IT IS NOT THEIR PHONE NUMBER AT ALL")
- Soundbite: "I could not find their phone number anywhere on their website... So what did I do? I went to Google and I wrote in Royal Caribbean customer service phone number USA... And then the AI result came up." // "Here are several options. And you see that number... right there... It will actually say Royal Caribbean. It's pretty wild, but it is not Royal Caribbean's phone number. It is not their phone number at all."
- ⚠️ WEAK: a creator's green-screen video with very few views, and the case is from 2025. The demo below can carry the beat without it.
- ⚠️ The scam number is readable on screen at about 2:13–2:21: blur it.

DEMO (show-produced): Jeff asks Google's AI for an airline's customer service number on screen, then opens the airline's own app to find the real one.

- Out: Google says its protections are "highly effective" and it took the pages down. But here's the thing: you never needed to search in the first place.
- Red flag: an answer that tells you to ask for a "tier two claims agent" or an "escalation line." That's a script, not an airline.

THIS FAKE AIRLINE EMAIL KNOWS YOUR NAME... AND YOUR CONFIRMATION CODE

A6 · nationwide (Frontier Airlines warning) · Nov 2026

- And now they're coming to your inbox, with your real trip details.

- Frontier Airlines is warning passengers about fake emails with their real names, real confirmation codes and real itineraries.
- One says you're owed a refund, just re-enter your card. Another says there's a payment problem with your next flight.
- One traveler got the refund email and filmed himself reading it. So how real does it look?

CLIP 5 (VERTICAL): TikTok @jayayers3 — the fake Frontier refund email · Nov 2026 · length unknown

  - ⚠️ MANUAL: TikTok blocks requests from here, so there's no transcript or timecode. Kyle pulls it and picks the slice where he reads the $387.90 refund offer.

CLIP 6 (VERTICAL): TikTok @shane.wilson0712 — another fake airline email (producer pick) · Nov 2026 · length unknown

  - ⚠️ MANUAL: producer-supplied (11/11). TikTok blocks requests from here and the post has no public caption, so I haven't seen what it says. Kyle pulls it, picks the slice and confirms it's about an airline email before the bible.

- Out: Your real name and your real confirmation code, and it's still a scam. Frontier says it never emails you asking for payment or reservation details.
- Red flag: it knows your trip and asks for your card. Close it, and open the airline's app yourself.

THE AIRLINE TOLD THIS FAMILY THEIR TICKETS WERE FAKE... AT THE COUNTER

A7 · Dallas, TX · Sep 2025 · ⚠️ old case

- And even when you book it yourself, you may not have a real ticket at all.
- These cousins found one-way tickets to a family wedding for $625 apiece on a travel website, and bought five.
- They got to the airport, walked up to the check-in counter, and handed over their confirmation.
- So what did the airline tell them?

CLIP 7 (HORIZONTAL): FOX 4 Dallas-Fort Worth — BBB warns consumers after family's $2,500 travel loss · Sep 25, 2025 · 3:32

  - 0:20–0:38 ("WERE OUT $2500") // BUTT 0:55–1:10 ("FORWARDING MY CALL TO VOICEMAIL")
  - Soundbite: "...two Dallas cousins were trying to attend a family member's wedding in Las Vegas, but after an airline flagged their tickets bought through a company called Flying Fair, they ended up missing the wedding and were out $2500." // "She was like, 'No, these tickets were flagged as fraud. We can't let you guys get on the flight.'... so I started calling Flying Fair and they wouldn't answer. They kept forwarding my call to voicemail."
  - ⚠️ LEGAL: the clip names the booking company; its silence (no answer to four emails, an F from the BBB) comes later in the package, at 2:19. Jeff says it in the out.

- Out: They missed the wedding, and the company never answered. It has an F from the Better Business Bureau. And in Florida, an older couple paid almost twelve thousand dollars for fourteen tickets. The airline had three.
- Red flag: a price way below everyone else, from a company that isn't the airline.

THIEVES ARE WORKING THE BAGGAGE CAROUSEL... AND YOUR BAG IS NEXT

A8 · Miami, FL · Jul 2026

- And even after you land, they're waiting at baggage claim.
- At Miami's airport, deputies say two men came in from the curb, pulled bags off the carousel and drove away.
- Investigators say it added up to more than twenty-seven thousand dollars in luggage. So how fast does it happen?

CLIP 8 (HORIZONTAL): WPLG Local 10 — Pair accused of stealing more than $27K worth of luggage at MIA · Aug 1, 2026 · 2:02

    - 0:56–1:09 ("QUICKLY LEAVING IN GETAWAY CARS")
    - Soundbite: "Investigators say surveillance video shows them in walking into the airport, making a bee line for baggage carousels, grabbing suitcases, and quickly leaving in getaway cars."
    - ⚠️ LEGAL: the two men are named and shown elsewhere in the package. Keep "investigators say"; these are charges, not convictions.
- Out: Off the belt and out the door. These are charges, not convictions, and both men are in jail.
- Red flag: someone hanging around the carousel with no bag tag and no boarding pass. Get there first.

HERE'S HOW TO PROTECT YOURSELF

A9 · the fix

1. GET YOUR AIRLINE'S NUMBER FROM THE APP... NEVER FROM A SEARCH (the one place from the tease)
    - Open the airline's app, your confirmation email, or your boarding pass. The real number is right there.
    - Never call a number from a search result, an ad, or an AI answer.
    - Save the real number in your phone today, before you need it. So what do the experts say? Listen.
    - CLIP 9 (HORIZONTAL): ABC 7 Chicago — Suburban woman recovers nearly $4K after fake airline support scam · Jul 23, 2026 · 4:14
        - 3:27–3:50 ("YOUR HOTEL CREDIT CARD")
        - Soundbite: "...can also send you phishing messages claiming that something is wrong with your current travel. They can trick you into sending payment information, so always contact companies directly... get real numbers through your app or by calling the number on the back of your airline credit card or your hotel credit card."
2. NO REAL AIRLINE CHARGES YOU TO FIX ITS OWN PROBLEM
    - If the airline canceled your flight, you're owed a refund. You don't pay to get it.
    - Anyone asking for money to rebook a canceled flight, or to send you a refund, hang up.
3. NEVER CLICK A LINK ABOUT YOUR BOOKING... OPEN THE APP YOURSELF
    - Even if the email has your name and your confirmation code.
    - Frontier says it will never ask you to re-enter your card, confirm a flight, or pay to get a refund by email.
4. MAKE SURE YOUR TICKET IS REAL
    - Within a day of booking, put your confirmation code into the airline's own app or website. If it isn't there, call the airline at the number from step one.
    - Book with the airline directly when you can, and pay with a credit card, not a debit card.
5. ALREADY PAID A SCAMMER? CALL YOUR CARD COMPANY FIRST
    - Then call the airline at the real number, and ask them to lock down your reservation.
    - Change your airline account password.
6. AT BAGGAGE CLAIM, GET TO THE CAROUSEL FIRST
    - Use a bright, easy-to-spot bag tag, and keep your medications and valuables in your carry-on.

CLOSE

- Send this to someone who's flying soon, before they ever search for their airline's number.
- The next video to watch. See you next time.

BUILD SHEET

For Claude and the pipeline. The room can skip this page.

Spine

- In one sentence: When a trip goes wrong, scammers are the "agents" who answer the number you searched for; they take your money, and sometimes your real flight; get the number from the airline's own app, every time.
- Hold back: where the real number lives (the app, the confirmation email, the boarding pass: step 1), and that a real airline never charges you to fix its own cancellation (step 2). The tease promises "the one place to get your airline's number"; it doesn't say where.
- Peg: Frontier's phishing warning (Nov 2, 2026; ABC7 KGO, Nov 11) and the biggest travel weeks of the year (Thanksgiving Nov 26). Why-now chain: flights change and cancel → travelers search for help fast, on their phones → the scammer's number is the one that comes up. "The number looks real. The agent isn't." The copy stays evergreen (Jeff, 11/11): no holiday, season or relative date in any spoken line; the holiday lives in the title, thumbnail and description.
- Climb: closer to you and less you can do, each block: you called them (A2) → they come back for more (A3) → they take the trip itself (A4) → the search engine's own answer sends you there (A5) → they write to you with your real booking (A6) → the ticket you bought yourself isn't real (A7) → they're at baggage claim after you land (A8) → you take it back.
- Framing: a scammer posing as the airline (on the phone, in an email, in a search result, on a booking site) when you're trying to fix or book a trip. A8 is the exception: a thief, not a scam; it sits last, short, ahead of the fix.
- Open package: clip 1, the Omaha mom: "the moment I heard that word standby… I was totally panicking."
- Payoff point: A9 (step 1, the one place to get your airline's number).
- Weight: 100% of show · 9 clips.

Jeff should know

- A2: WOWT says the family thought they were calling Delta; no airline is accused of anything. They filed a fraud report with their credit card company, hoping to get the $7,000 charge canceled, and no outcome has been reported. So the copy says the money went to a scammer, not that it's gone for good.
- A2: they weren't stranded in the end; the "standby" problem never existed. The copy says "trying to get home."
- A3: her flight was canceled in September 2025; the second call came months later. She's disputing the charges with her bank (no outcome reported). American Airlines determined it was an impostor.
- A4: AmEx refunded the $4,000 after reporters got involved; she never got back about $2,000 for the original tickets. She believes Icelandair's own chat gave her the number; Icelandair says it found no evidence of that. The clip and the copy leave that out.
- A5: the Rivlin case is from August 2025 (Washington Post). The Boston case (Oct 2026 report) lost no money: her card company stopped a $4,500 charge, and the report doesn't say her number came from the AI answer. Google: "Our anti-spam protections are highly effective at keeping scams out of our features"; it removed the pages flagged.
- A6: no victims or losses reported from the Frontier emails. Frontier hasn't said how scammers got real booking details. Never say "breach": Frontier disclosed a separate customer-care database incident (Oct 2, 2026) and hasn't linked it.
- A7: September 2025. Frontier later refunded the tickets bought at the airport and offered vouchers; the cousins say they're getting some money back. The company in the clip ("Flying Fair," BBB listing Fly-n-Fare) didn't answer four emails. The Florida couple in the out paid in March 2024 (WESH 2); the site isn't named because no one's been charged.
- A8: charges, not convictions; both men were in jail at the time of the report. Not a scam: it's the one street-crime beat, kept short.
- A9 step 2: the federal rule (cited by ABC15) is a full refund for a canceled flight, within 7 days on a credit card and 20 days by check or cash; you can't be forced to take a voucher. The copy says "you're owed a refund" without the timeline.

The fix: sources

- Step 1: get the number from the app, confirmation email or boarding pass; never from a search or AI answer (ABC 7 Chicago, Jul 23, 2026, clip 9; ABC15: "go directly to a business website to find their contact information"; The Points Guy, Oct 27, 2026). Save it before you leave (BBB and Delta via WOWT, Jun 4, 2026).
- Step 2: you're owed a full refund when the airline cancels; never pay to get one (ABC15, citing federal rules; ⚠️ load the DOT page, transportation.gov/airconsumer, before air).
- Step 3: Frontier won't email asking you to revalidate a flight, re-enter a card, pay for a refund or confirm billing (flyfrontier.com/phishing-awareness; ABC7 KGO, Nov 11, 2026).
- Step 4: check the confirmation code in the airline's app or site within a day (Delta via ANF, Aug 11, 2026 ⚠️ secondary); book direct and pay by credit card (BBB via FOX 4, Sep 25, 2025; BBB via Local 3, Nov 9, 2026).
- Step 5: call the card company first, then the airline, change the password (The Points Guy, Oct 27, 2026; ABC 7 Chicago: AmEx reversed the charge, but first said she'd missed the 60-day window).
- Step 6: get to the carousel first, distinctive tag, valuables and medication in the carry-on (⚠️ no official source loaded; check TSA or the airport's guidance).
- Do-nothing test: a viewer who only saves the number (step 1) is still exposed to the email (step 3) and the fake booking site (step 4). A viewer who already paid needs step 5 the same day, because card disputes run on deadlines (River Forest nearly lost hers past 60 days).

Gaps

- ⚠️ A2 timed on a Whisper transcript of WOWT's site copy, the same 2:54 package as the linked YouTube upload (1mDM5IJySmk); YouTube captions were blocked. Confirm the outcues on the YouTube copy.
- ⚠️ A3 Phoenix is September 2025 (the cancellation): date in a Jeff note. Timed on a Whisper transcript of the page's video stream.
- ⚠️ A4 and A9 are timed on the YouTube copy's captions (LG3ZJa_OnOU, 4:14); ABC7's site copy runs one second shorter.
- ⚠️ A5 Rivlin is August 2025: date in a Jeff note. Upload date unconfirmed (YouTube blocked the lookup).
- ⚠️ A6 no transcript or length for either TikTok; manual pulls. Clip 6 (@shane.wilson0712) was added by the producer and I couldn't see its content: confirm it's an airline email.
- ⚠️ A7 Dallas is September 2025: date in a Jeff note. The Florida couple in the out is March 2024: date in a Jeff note.
- ⚠️ YouTube view counts and upload dates: confirmed only for WPLG (Aug 1, 2026, ~25K). The other dates are the outlets' story dates.
- ⚠️ The Instagram reel the producer sent (Dbs_h8yDoyy) is unplaced: it wouldn't load here.

Open calls

- A3 LEGAL: the cut keeps the impostor reveal (segment 3) with her complaint about American Airlines (segment 1). Approve the three-part cut, or trim segment 1.
- A4 LEGAL: the cut leaves out her claim that Icelandair's own chat gave her the number (the airline denies it). Approve.
- A7 and A8 LEGAL: the booking company and the two accused men are named in the packages; the copy attributes ("investigators say") and says the company didn't answer. Approve.
- A6: two TikToks now (clips 5 and 6). Keep both, or pick the stronger one after the manual pull?
- A5 is WEAK: keep the Rivlin clip under the demo, or let the demo carry the beat alone? If the demo turns up a scam number on camera, cut the clip.
- The demo (A5): who sets up and screen-records Jeff asking Google's AI for an airline's number?
- A8 is a thief, not a scam: keep it, cut it, or swap in ABC 10 San Diego's serial luggage thief (WDOR0oT9PA4, ~2.2M views, older victim on camera, upload date unconfirmed)? It's the biggest clip we found, but it's likely older.
- A7: the case changed from the pre-bible's Florida couple (no video) to the Dallas cousins (FOX 4, on camera); the Florida couple is now one line in the out. OK? If yes, the row becomes SWAP.
- A9: the planned BBB clip had no reachable video, so clip 9 is ABC 7 Chicago's tip under step 1. OK? If yes, the row becomes SWAP.
- The producer's Instagram reel: what is it, and which block does it belong in?
- Sponsor spots for the break.
- Guest: none booked. Amy Nofziger (AARP) or The Points Guy's Michelle Couch-Friedman if the room wants one.
